

Cell phone use onboard the aircraft should continue the way it is. If allowed during flight, the flight attendants would be delayed or may not give the service all passengers deserve. It will be an annoyance to other passengers by delaying the boarding and deplaning process, and disrupting the peaceful atmosphere while in flight. Safety will also be compromised. Passengers using cell phones during emergency announcements or during an emergency will put themselves in danger and other passengers. Also, for the passengers' convenience, the phone should remain off because the battery tends to lose power more quickly if left on during flight.
